

ASSEFN

Aspects of Modernization in Emerging Nations of the World

By

Okoli Annmarie Nkemejina,

Department of Sociology and Anthropology,
Nnamdi Azikiwe University, Awka,
Anambra State.

And

Umoru-Sule Eseoghene (Ph.D)

College of Physical and Health Education,
Mosogar, Delta State.

Abstract

The article is particularly premised on modernization with special attention on its various aspects and the impact these aspects which include; population, urbanization, education, economics, politics, science and as dimensions have on the entire process of modernization and sustainable national development particularly within the underdeveloped and the developing nations of the world. The concept of modernization within the scope of this paper is seen as an on-going and open-ended process which cannot be achieved at a time. The process of modernization is dynamic and evolves changes in whatever measure or style it may occur. The paper concludes by asserting that for modernization to be effective and functional in any nation be it developing or underdeveloped the various dimensions of modernization should be religiously strengthened as it is done in the fully modernized nations of the world. Recommendations on how best this can be achieved were advanced.

Keywords: Modernization and Aspects of modernization